ABSTRACT

Presenting data on the characteristics of associate degree recipients from 1991-92 and 1992-93 at Miami-Dade Community College (M-DCC), in Florida, this report provides tables for M-DCC as a whole and on the five campuses comprising the college (i.e., North, Kendall, Wolfson, Medical Center, and Homestead). First, information is presented on the entry-level skills of graduates college-wide. Then, tables are presented for M-DCC as a whole and for each individual campus indicating the number of graduates by certification type by term of completion, certification type for 1982-83 through 1992-93, year of first admission, certification type and ethnicity, certification type and gender, citizenship status, residency, and age at graduation. Tables are also presented showing a comparison of unduplicated headcount to total graduations, mean credit hours earned and attempted for 1991-92 and 1992-93, mean grade point average (GPA), and mean number of terms completed. Highlighted findings include the following: (1) systemwide, the total number of Associate in Arts graduates for 1992-93 was 3,873, compared to 1,119 Associate in Science graduates; (2) over 40% of the graduates system-wide began academically underprepared; (3) Black non-Hispanics accounted for 17% (n=884) of graduates in 1992-93, representing a 10% increase over the previous year; (4) the average age of the graduates was 25.7 years old; and (5) the mean GPA declined slightly from the previous year to 2.88. Graduate Profile for
Miami-Dade Community College
1991-92 and 1992-93

The purpose of the graduate profile is to provide information on Miami-Dade graduates each year. This information includes the number of graduates college-wide and by campus, the ethnicity and gender of these graduates, their ages, types of degrees earned, and credits and/or terms needed to graduate. The report is formatted so that college-wide information is presented first, followed by a section for each campus. This narrative will focus on college-wide information.

The number of Associate in Arts graduates decreased this year by -3.2% to 3,873, while the number of Associate in Science graduates increased by 5% to 1,119. This pattern is a repeat of the prior year when Associate in Arts degrees declined and Associate in Science degrees rose. The total number of Associate degree recipients for 1992-93 was 4,992 compared to 5,058 the prior year.

Over 40% of these graduates began as academically underprepared. More than half of the Associate in Science graduates began academically underprepared (57%) compared to slightly over one-third of the Associate in Arts graduates (37%). In contrast, over one-fifth of the Associate in Arts graduates were university-eligible when they entered Miami-Dade (21%) compared to only 9% of the Associate in Science graduates.

Ethnic data revealed a 10% increase in awards to Black Non-Hispanic students on top of an 11% increase the prior year. There were 884 completions earned by Black Non-Hispanics, bringing their proportion of our total completions to 17%. Completions by White Non-Hispanics declined by 5%, while Hispanic students' completions remained relatively constant.

The average age of our graduates has increased slightly and is now 25.7 years old. Students continue to earn more than 80 hours on average before receiving a degree. The number of terms completed in order to graduate increased this year to 10, a reversal of the past several years. The mean grade point average declined slightly to 2.88.

Note: Academically Underprepared students are below the placement score on one or more basic skills subject areas. Adequately Prepared students are above the placement scores, but have not scored high enough to be considered University Eligible. University Eligible students are those who scored above the 65th percentile in all basic skills subject areas.

*The majority of graduates in this category transferred from another institution or entered prior to the requirement of entry-level test scores.
